Behind the Design of the CIHC Acorn Blanket

The CIHC Acorn Blanket was designed by Meyo Marrufo as is a continuation of the CIHC Outreach Initiative branding and logo design. Meyo describes the blanket design as “The logo in the middle was a collaboration of California Native American artists Eric Wilder with input from artists Weshoyot Alvitre, Jacky Calanchini, Carla Munoz, Victorio Shaw, and Ali Meders-Knight. The outside depicts some of our basketry materials from California, including red bud, tule, bracken fern, and willow.”

The blanket was made by Eighth Generation, a Seattle-based Native American-owned company that partners with community-based Native artists around the country to design, manufacture and market beautiful blankets and gifts. They proudly state, “We are boldly reclaiming control over the market for products featuring Native art and the stories that go with them – all while building the business capacity of our artist partners through the Inspired Natives@ Project.”
